There are numerous ways to reference. Different institutions, departments or lecturers may require different styles. Check with the latest APA (American Psychological Association) style is most frequently used within the social sciences, in order to refer various sources.

Bad referencing is a common way for students to lose marks in assignments, it is worth both time and effort to learn how to reference correctly.

At the end of your essay, place a list of the references you have cited in the text. Arrange this in alphabetical order of authors' surnames, and then chronologically (earliest publication date first) for each author where more than one work by that author is cited.

Why Do We Cite and Reference?

When writing final report for your internship graduation, you need to highlight your use of other author's ideas and words so that you:

- give the original author credit for their own ideas and work
- enable the reader to follow up on the original work if they wish to
- enable the reader to see how dated the information might be
- prove to your tutors/lecturers that you have read around the subject
- avoid plagiarism

What is Plagiarism?

- Presenting another's ideas as if they are your own – either directly or indirectly
- Copying or pasting text and images without saying where they came from
- Not showing when a quote is a quote
- Summarizing information without showing the original source
- Changing a few words in a section of text without acknowledging the original author
